

Press Release

Luther Named Engineer of the Year

Indianapolis, Ind. (June 15, 2015) – The Indiana Society of Professional Engineers (ISPE) presented Ann D. Luther, PE, its 2015 Engineer of the Year award in recognition of her outstanding contributions to the engineering profession and her community.

The award is awarded based upon the engineer's professional society activities, positions held, and achievements, along with that person's other technical society activities, positions held, and achievements. This award also considers the engineer's community and humanitarian activities, positions held, and achievements. In addition, the engineer's honors, awards, and other laudatory recognition from any source are used to determine which person is selected for the award.

Ann received this award in honor of her involvement in civil engineering and quality management. For several years, she has supported ISPE and was just recently elected to the executive board as its secretary. Notable amongst her community service is serving for over fifteen years as member of the Purdue University Women in Engineering Panel. She is well-known for her international travels, including climbing Mount Kilimanjaro and hiking Hadrian's Wall across Northern England.

Michael Fink, PE, a past-President of ISPE, presented the award to Ann on behalf of ISPE during its 2015 annual conference on June 12, 2015. ISPE President Scott S. Haraburda, PhD, PE, commented that Ann had, "significant engineering accomplishments and valuable community service, making her a worthy selection as this year's ISPE Engineer of the Year."

The National Society of Professional Engineers (NSPE) is the national society of licensed professional engineers from all disciplines that promotes the ethical and competent practice of engineering, advocates licensure, and enhances the image and well-being of its members. Founded in 1934, NSPE serves more than 35,000 members and the public through 53 state and territorial societies and more than 400 chapters. The ISPE is the state society that supports Indiana.